KEOUGH SCHOOL OF GLOBAL AFFAIRS
Klau Institute for Civil and Human Rights

The Donald R. Keough School of Global Affairs

Founded in 2014, the Keough School builds on the strengths of nine institutes focused on international research, scholarship, and education at Notre Dame. In keeping with Notre Dame's mission to place scholarship in service to the common good, the Keough School advances integral human development through research, policy and practice; transformative educational programs, and partnerships for global engagement.

The Keough School addresses some of the world's greatest challenges, with particular emphasis on the design and implementation of effective and ethical responses to poverty, war, disease, political oppression, environmental degradation, and other threats to dignity and human flourishing.

The Klau Institute for Civil and Human Rights

One of the Keough School's nine international institutes, the Klau Institute is also the school's oldest. Founded in 1973 by Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C., the institute has a unique focus on both domestic and international rights, particularly with regard to the role of race.

The Klau Institute administers an undergraduate minor in civil and human rights that draws students from across the academic spectrum, as well as research initiatives that seek to advance the Keough School's commitment to integral human development. The Klau Institute is proud to support the work of Professor Búzás in the International Race and Rights Lab.
