Course Description

Scholars of international politics have long neglected the role of race and racism in world affairs, even though the origins of international relations as an academic discipline rest in the early years of the 20th century, when questions of imperialism and governance over different races necessitated the development of new ways of thinking about inter-state and inter-racial relations. Over the past decade, however, prompted by insights from the post-colonial theory but also by continued Western military engagements in the Middle East and Africa, new scholarly publications have sought to bring back the analysis of “the color line” into our conversations about global politics. The topics that these works have highlighted include – among others - the role of African-Americans in the development of international relations and the U.S. foreign policy, the impact of scientific racism on Western understanding of itself and its political projects in the world, the rise of Afro-Asian solidarity and the non-aligned movement during the Cold War, and different articulations of non-Western subjectivities and their prospects for having “a voice” in world affairs.

This is the course about the role of race and racism in international politics. The key impetus for the creation of the course is to bring an even more diverse group of undergraduate students into the conversations about international politics on our campus. The study of international relations in the United States is still a predominantly white endeavor. One of the main goals of this course is to encourage students from a variety of backgrounds to enter the field of international politics with an understanding that others have done it before them.

Readings

Most readings will be available on Canvas. Additional readings pertinent to the class might be emailed through the listserv or posted in Announcements.

Students are required to acquire the following book:

Sorayya Khan, City of Spies (Little A, 2017).

Requirements

Grade will be based on:

- Brief (250 words maximum) responses to weekly questions, based upon your readings. Questions will be posted in advance of the readings and discussions in class. They will open each Thursday at 5 p.m. and will be due on Sunday at 8 p.m. You will have one hour to respond to the question, so you will have to start answering before 7 p.m. on Sunday to meet the deadline. Over the course of the semester, each student will have to respond to 10 questions, worth 3 points each, for the maximum of 30 points.
- Three written assignments - a brief research paper (2500 words maximum, 15 points) due March 29 (topics and the format will be discussed in class), a book review (1250-1500 words, 10 points) due April 10, and a cumulative take-home exam due April 24 (2500 words maximum, 25 points). Questions for the take-home exam will be distributed on April 17.
- Two visual - Adobe Spark - projects (10 points each) due February 27 and March 13 respectively.
- Participation/attendance grade works the following way: students who do not miss a single class will receive 3 extra points, students who miss 2 classes will receive 1 extra point, students who miss 3 or more classes will not receive any extra points.

Please note that students who miss more than 30% of classes (12) will not be allowed to take the final exam and will receive a failing grade for the course.

Grade scale is 94-100 A; 90-93 A-; 87-89 B+; 84-86 B; 80-83 B-; 77-79 C+; 74-76 C; 70-73 C-; 67-69 D+; 64-66 D; 60-63 D- .

For current regulations on grades and grade point averages at the University of Florida please see <http://www.registrar.ufl.edu/catalog/policies/regulationgrades.html> (Links to an external site.)Links to an external site.

Attendance

Participation/attendance grade works the following way: students who do not miss a single class and actively participate in discussions will receive extra 3 points, students who miss 1 class will receive 2 extra points, students who miss 2 classes will receive 1 extra points, students who miss 3 classes or more will not receive any extra points. Students who miss more than 30% of classes (12) will not be allowed to take complete the course and will receive an E for the course. If you are missing classes for legitimate (medical) reasons, please bring appropriate evidence (along with exact dates of classes that you have missed) at the end of the semester, preferably in class on April 19th. It is very difficult for me to keep track of emails or brief mentions of absences at the end or beginning of classes and guarantee that your absences will be excused when points for attendance are ultimately calculated.

WARNING: WE WILL BE WATCHING A NUMBER OF FILMS AND DOCUMENTARIES IN CLASS. TREAT THEM WITH THE SAME DEGREE OF ATTENTION AND SERIOUSNESS AS YOUR READINGS. VISUALS SPEAK JUST LIKE WORDS.

LETTERS OF RECOMMENDATION POLICY

I am always happy to write a letter of recommendation for students who have taken at least two classes with me, and received As in both classes. Some exceptions are possible, but they are very, very rare. If you are graduating and think that you may need a letter for recommendation in a few years from now, you should ask your professors for a letter before you leave the University. It is very difficult to write a meaningful letter for a student, no matter how brilliant, several years after graduation. Keep in mind that the key word for a letter is meaningful – your letter writers should be familiar with you and with your work in order to be able to write letters that truly speak about you, your work, and your accomplishments. Generic letters, even if glowing, are useless in admissions processes in graduate schools and law schools. Ask for your letters those professors or teaching assistants who are most familiar with your work, even if they teach in a discipline different from the one that you are applying for in graduate school.
